Will be made known on application to the office

We will be surprised if the coming elections in New York and Pennsylvania do not increase the republican representation of those states in congress

Hon. Fernando Wood of New York has expressed the opinion that the United States are 'on the eve of the greatest prosperity the American people have seen from the Revolution down

A snow storm, raking in Georgetown Central, Idaho, Caribou and vicinities took place last Thursday night, and the cold blasts of winter suddenly took the place of Indian summer in those localities Colorado Springs looks for pleasant weather for many a day yet

Our readers will remember the killing of young A D Jessup in a duel by a man named Davis, at Deer Trail about two years ago. It is now stated on good authority that Davis has recently been hung for horse stealing in the Black Hills

An Indianapolis banker by the name of English, a democrat of hard money proclivities, is looming up as a formidable candidate for the seat in the United States senate now filled by Mr Voorhees The friends of the latter are accusing Senator McDonald with being too friendly to English The "Tall Sycamore" may be uprooted in the coming contest

The country on the Divide to the north of us has been greatly improved during the past two years. Thousands of acres of land have been fenced in and scores of neat houses erected The grass is better than it has ever been heretofore at this season, and stock is consequently in fine order and will do vastly better well The ranchmen are doing a large and profitable business

We are inclined to believe that when the coming congress is called upon to legislate upon questions of finance, the republicans will find many allies among the old time democrats of the Atlantic States The republican party is now much more united in favor of honest money than it has been for several years, and if it maintains its present position with firmness it will soon be completely restored to power by a discriminating and thoughtful people.

Taxes are high enough in El Paso county, but they are lower here than in any other county in the state we believe, with one exception Those who complain of taxes in El Paso county will derive some comfort from the following, taken from an editorial in the last issue of the Boulder News "Our taxes are too high, not only burdensome to the people, but are an obstacle to the coming in of men and money We have farmers who will have to sell six hundred bushels of wheat to pay this year's taxes There are houses to rent in Boulder the rent money of which will not pay the tax If they have to borrow money on this property for paying the tax, it will take the price of four bushels of wheat to get the trust deed written, and six more to get it recorded

While the business outlook is rapidly improving in the United States, particularly in the west, it is becoming more gloomy in England The London Times is evidently trying to prepare the public mind for new disasters in order that an uncontrollable panic may not ensue The manufacturing establishments and storehouses are filled to repletion with cotton and woolen goods, for which there is no market, and a general curtailment of production must soon take place, throwing additional thousands of men, women and children out of employment and deepening the alarm that pervades the whole of England

Something over a year ago an enthusiastic meeting of leading business men of St. Louis was held in that city for the purpose of taking immediate steps to build a narrow gauge railroad to Colorado Resolutions strongly favoring the project were passed and an executive committee was appointed to secure promised aid from a number of counties in Missouri, through which the proposed road was to pass Hon Frastus Wells was made chairman of this committee, and is he has allowed the enterprise to enjoy a calm and uninterrupted slumber ever since he is receiving a vigorous scolding from the many parties interested in the project Mr Wells is a candidate for congress, and his action in this railroad matter is being used against him with considerable effect

Under the caption of A Crying evil the Denver Tribune censures the system under which the Associated Press transacts its business We endorse all that the Tribune says upon the subject having uttered it common with all the Colorado papers that every dispatch through the monopoly in question The readers of these dispatches have doubtless noticed that much important news is published in such mutilated fragments as to render many of them quite senseless. We frequently get an inkling over the wires that some important event has occurred, and some days thereafter receive the fag end of a dispatch upon the subject, leaving everything of moment in relation thereto to be cleared up by the arrival of the mail We trust that the evil of which the Tribune complains may be corrected at an early day

Complaints loud and numerous continue to reach us of the bad condition of the road up Ute Pass and beyond in this county Bridges are broken down, holes two feet deep exist in many places, and broken wheels are piled up along the route as a warning to freighters to "Try not the pass" This condition of affairs should not be allowed to last It is not necessary to speak of the importance to the county of this great highway— It is said that only one of our county commissioners is in favor of its immediate repairation The other two are the recipients by proxy of much condemnation As we write this an irate teamster whose wagon has been reduced to the condition of the lone hoss shay by falling into a pit up Ute Pass is shaking his black mike in uncomfortable proximity to our ears and giving vent to many unmentionable expletives over the bad condition of the road Come gentlemen commissioners, if only for our sake move quickly

COLORADO SPRINGS

The oldest citizens of Colorado Springs never remember a period of greater prosperity than the present There have been times when there was greater speculative activity in real estate when more lots were being bought and sold, and more houses being built than now But the lots were usually low priced and the houses mere shanties At the present time lots and lands are higher in price than ever before, and none are being sold except for immediate improvement The houses now being erected are all good structures, ornaments to the town, and if not to be occupied by the builder are rented at once for a year or more in advance The closest observer can see nothing speculative in present real estate transactions So far as we can learn not a lot has been sold for months to a party who simply wishes to hold it for an advance All are to be immediately improved in a substantial manner Although many new houses have recently been built and a hundred others more or less enlarged it seems almost impossible to supply the demand for houses and rooms Our streets are lined with persons seeking such accommodations, and fifty good sized houses could doubtless be rented at good rates as rapidly as they could be built

One of the most suggestive and comforting features of this evidence of prosperity is the fact that few if any of the large number of persons coming hither depend directly or indirectly upon the mountain trade at the place If we agree to sell a dollars worth of goods to the mountains they would soon come to live here and the growth of the town which doubtless continue uninterruptedly even when a change in the railroad situation shall have cut us off from the mines to the west We have often predicted the growth of a large place here, and every present indication tends to show that the prediction will come to pass Nothing less than a population of twenty thousand will satisfy us

The time is close at hand when the work of properly protecting strawberry plants from the freezing and thawing weather of winter should be attended to As many of our readers have nice patches of these plants a few words upon the subject of mulching is in order In this country, owing to the great difference between the temperature of the days and nights causing sudden alternations of freezing and thawing, no fruit grower need expect to keep strawberry plants alive during the winter without mulching Without this protection we do not believe that one plant out of a hundred can survive one of our winters Many persons suppose that mulching is for the purpose of keeping the ground warm, and consequently pile on a large quantity of manure or other litter and frequently smother the plants The object of mulching is merely to shade the ground from the winters sun and by so doing keep it at a nearly uniform temperature Freezing, however severe in no way injures the plants if the frost is not allowed to be drawn out suddenly by the warm rays of the sun The covering should be light enough to allow the air free access to the ground otherwise many plants will be smothered A good mulch can be made of long horse manure straw in which there is no grain to row and give trouble during the following year, course old hay or leaves Any of these spread evenly over the ground an inch thick will answer every purpose In this country where we frequently have high winter winds, it is essential to weight the mulching in order to keep it from blowing away This can best be done by laying brush on the straw, leaves, or hay across the rows of plants and then placing boards poles or posts across the brush and between the rows of plants Such a mulching as we here recommend will not prevent the easy growth of the strawberry bed at any time One of a foot, immediately before mulching will probably be all that is necessary during the winter Snow will drift into the brush and lay much longer than elsewhere and as it melts it will furnish the plants with all the water required Mulching should be done as soon as the ground begins to freeze regularly at night

HANDS AND HEAD

The Place of Artistic Handicraft in Political Economy

But needlework is a great deal more than a common every day act it rises very high indeed almost into fine art and if I try to speak of subjects connected with the means of subsistence although needlework in its lower branches is the worst paid labor in the whole country, yet needlework in its higher branches is very well paid indeed and to young persons who are practicing or learning needlework what I would advise do not be content with practicing it in its lower forms try and learn the nature of embroidery and see what you can do in practicing the higher forms of needlework In the first place it is an improving process and in the second it is a lucrative process, and generally I would advise that the people of this country should give more attention than they do to raising hand labor of all kinds to the excellence of which it is susceptible They are too fond of getting out of hand labor and getting into what they call head labor—that is to say, getting sufficiently acquainted with reading and writing and casting up accounts perhaps to get into the lower class of clerks I do not believe there is a more distressed class in the country than that class and I believe that a great number of young people would do infinitely better for themselves and for society if they were content to keep much more than they do to the use of their hands and would try to raise the character of the labor which they perform with their hands because—pray remember this—that a great deal of the very highest labor is labor performed with the hands Look at the labor of the painter, of the sculptor, and not only so, but look at a great many intermediate kinds of labor—hand labor which is strictly all dependent on an excellent hand Now there is a great deficiency of that kind of labor in this country Go into the study of a sculptor in London and you will find that the sculptor probably an Englishman is obliged to have a great many assistants because working at the marble requires very much to be done before the stage of finishing comes and these assistants are well paid but if you come to talk to them you will find that in the large majority of these cases they are not Englishmen at all, but Italians and Frenchmen—very commonly Italians. What I want you to do is this not to be in such a hurry to get into so low a class of head labor as copying clerks or something of that kind People should recollect that handicraft itself is capable of being raised to a very high description of art and of yielding a very high standard of remuneration I cannot tell you how anxious I am to impress that upon the mind of young people, and how certain I feel that the lesson is one of great importance to the people of this country Let them perform their work in the spirit of an artist let them try to give it excellence and make it a thing that not only will sell but as good as they can make it as useful as well put together, as well proportioned, as pleasing to the eye as full of beauty as they can make it and the more they try to do it the better they will be able to do it.—Speech by Mr Gladstone.

We call attention in to-day's paper to the card of Dr. J. F. Hewitt. Dr. H has been very successful in the nearing of several cows in this vicinity, and we take pleasure in recommending him to all in need of his services.

George Bowers, the boy lightning-slinger in this city for the W. U. telegraph company, came down town yesterday limping and showing signs of late hours. When asked what was the matter, he replied: "Matter enough; girl; 9 pounds."

Mrs. Bowers, one of the greatest actresses of the age, will commence a two weeks' engagement on Monday evening, at Forrester's opera house, Denver, supported by the Forrester company. On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings respectively will be presented "Hunchback," "Camille," and "Leah"

Last Wednesday Dr. C. E. Edwords went out east of town to see a patient. Before he got home his horse indulged in that innocent equine pastime, a "bucking" spree, and succeeded in throwing the doctor. Alighting on the left hip, he was so badly lamed that he was unable to get home until yesterday evening

Fairfield & Eaton, who have formed a copartnership in the plumbing business, will have a full stock of plumbers' articles in a few days, and will be ready to fill all orders in that line When the water works shall have been completed they will procure permits to tap the water pipe, and will complete the supply and turn it over ready for use in the shortest possible time

Yesterday evening Frank Pierce, runner for the Colorado Springs hotel, and Chas. Henderson, runner for the Crawford House, engaged in a set to on the depot platform. The crowd was inclined to let them fight it out, until Sheriff Becker arrived on the scene and parted the belligerents. On their arrival up town they were taken in charge by Officer Beall, and marched off to Justice Smith's office, where they pleaded guilty, and were assessed five dollars and costs as the city's interest in the affair.

J. K. Sweeney, of the signal corps, came down from the Peak yesterday. He reports a new curiosity on the Peak in the shape of a monument recently erected there with the following epitaph, viz:

their infant daughter
Erin,
who was devoured by the mountain rats at Pike's Peak signal station,

The Forrester Company's Last Night.

The Forrester company completed its week's engagement at City hall last evening, on which occasion was presented the Four Sisters, a comedy which was done in charming style, Mrs Mrs Forrester appearing as the four sisters. To this was added some German comicalities by Spencer, songs by Miss Somers, a budget of fun by De Marbelle, specialty by Dunne, and the "Black Chemist," a farce, by Dunne, Spencer and Cooke. It was fun, first last and all the time The hall was crowded, and frequently shook from the effects of the explosions of laughter People need not feel surprised if the janitor reports this week a good find of buttons on the floor

The Forresters leave to-day for Denver, their home, on the 8 05 Leadville express They will certainly carry with them the best wishes of the theatre-going portion of this community, and when they return, as they expect to do in the course of a couple of months, they will be gladly welcomed

Acacia Place and Alamo Square.

In the Colorado Springs GAZETTE of July 11th, 1874, in closing an article on the "experimental garden" that patch of ground situated just east of the depot the editor says, in reference to Acacia Place and Alamo Square "It is about time, too, for something to be done to our two public squares, or are they to remain forever as barren and desolate enclosures, to prove our taste and enterprise to all new comers?"

The above question was prophetic a fact which a look at those two desert wastes will abundantly substantiate. It is true, Acacia Place was once the scene of a feeble effort to produce something attractive in the way of trees and shrubbery, but those barren stubs which remain only tell how fierce was the contest of the cows for something green during grasshopper time, reminding old soldiers of the appearance of the underbrush on Chancellorsville battle ground, shortly after the two days struggle there, May 24, 1863, where Stone wall Jackson received his death wound (on two occasions which, with a slight bit of sarcasm, are sometimes called pinks, could be made to blossom as the rose, becoming in a few years places where people would delight to congregate. Will this be done or shall we let the matter rest for some reporter to spread himself upon four years hence?

OUT WEST.

Alex. Mead, who bought G. H Adams' farm, brought into our office last Saturday some luscious, ripe luxuriant strawberries, picked from his garden that morning There are green ones on the vines now.—Greeley Tribune of Oct. 9th

County Clerk Scott has forwarded to the land office, at Denver, in the last two weeks, twenty-five applications for pre-emption on railroad lands, covering 4,000 acres These applications are all filed on farming lands.—Ft. Collins Courier

The Ute commissioners have selected as a site for the Ute reservation, lands on the head waters of the Navajo and Blanco rivers, in this State, and the Indians will be removed from their old reservation to the new at the most favorable time.

S. A. Barkley (of Grenada) sends us a sample of his sweet potatoes, of which he raised about 3,000 pounds, The samples measure from eight to eleven inches in circumference and and yet these were not the largest he raised He has also been experimenting with pea nuts and with excellent success, having a crop of about five bushels.—Las Animas Leader.

The San Juan Sentinel has little hopes that the Ute commission will accomplish anything this year It says, "If the commission goes to Los Pinos or the Southern Ute agency it will be found that weeks ago Ignacio and his head chiefs went to New Mexico to avoid meeting the commission, so that they may not be asked to hold a treaty They will also find, when they arrive at the Uncompahgre agency, that Ouray will not "heap talk," and that some of the chiefs, who are a necessary portion of the treaty, are in the northern portion of the state, where they cannot be found. The delay of the commissioners and the weariness of the Indians will make a treaty impossible for this year without doubt."

Among the most encouraging reports which daily appear in Colorado papers are those proving the agricultural resources of the state. Rich mines are among the choicest treasures of a country, but if the miners have to draw their supplies from abroad, the country cannot be permanently prosperous. But there is no danger that Colorado will have to depend upon other states for her food. Though for a time, while the overmastering attraction of our mining interests may turn more labor to the mines than can be fed by home produce, there can be no doubt that our rich soil is quite capable of raising food for a much larger population than the mines can ever employ, while we will continue to send animal products to the east. While the southern states made cotton, sugar and tobacco their staple crops, and imported food from the north, everybody was poor, now that their hog and hominy are raised at home they are reaching out toward a general prosperity they never knew before. There is no danger that Colorado will ever be poor because of the importation of food, for evidences accumulate on every hand that our farming population is rapidly increasing, and that it meets with every encouragement. Some outlay is undoubtedly required for irrigating appliances, but when these are employed the results amply pay for the outlay. Colorado can not only raise her own food, but that which she raises is unsurpassed for excellence. Trinidad Enterprise

CONSUMPTION

The following letter from the Agricultural editor of the Toledo Blade may prove of interest to sufferers from consumption and weak lungs

Office of the Toledo Blade,
J. Elsom Agricultural Editor.
FORESTVILLE, N. Y., 25 May, 1878.

Gentlemen

I have been a sufferer from hemorrhage of the lungs for years Was reduced to 98 pounds In February last was induced to try your Galvanic Appliances. I weigh now 136½ pounds and am gaining 2½ pounds per week. They have far exceeded my most sanguine expectations. I have no more hemorrhages You are at liberty to refer to me.

Gratefully yours, F ELSOM.

Electricity as a curative agent has enlisted the attention of the most eminent of the medical profession. Those most learned in electro therapeutics find that it is the continuous galvanic current that is most effective, and therefore use and commend the direct application of it, through appliances generating a continuous galvanic current. In the improvements thus far made in this important branch of electric science, the American Galvanic Co., of New York, have more fully met the requirements than any others They make appliances to fully cover the lungs, back, spine, and shoulders, as well as every part of the body. The current thus generated acts gently upon the nerves, muscles, glands, etc, of the lungs and infuses new life in the blood, giving a fuller and freer respiration Their medical electrician will be at Colorado Springs from the 20th to the 25th inst, and can be consulted free of charge concerning the diseases these wonderful appliances cure.
